

A 10x10 grid with 30 black circles scattered across it. The circles are distributed in a way that suggests a random process, with some clusters and some empty spaces. For example, there is a small cluster of three circles in the top-left corner, and another of two in the bottom-right corner. There are also several circles isolated in their respective grid cells.